

ABSTRACT

A semiconductor package where electrical connections or bumps extending from the die may have, for example, at least a distal portion of the die where the electrical connection or bump narrows when moving towards the distal tip, and/or where a connection point or area on the bump or electrical connection that is attached to the die is wider than a more distal connection point on the bump electrical connection, or other suitable geometry.